JASMINE CHO

Cookie Activism Workshop
Using Sugar to Elevate Representation for Asian Americans

Jasmine M. Cho is a Pittsburgh-based artist, author, and cookie activist most known for using portrait cookies to elevate representation for Asian Americans & Pacific Islanders. Her work has been featured internationally on various media outlets that include NPR, HuffPost, CBS This Morning, and The Korea Daily. A TEDx speaker and Food Network Champion, Jasmine hopes to use her platform to expand the frontiers of research-based bake therapy and make the kitchen a more accessible and empowering space for creativity and healing.

Attendees will have the opportunity to design their activism cookie as they learn from Jasmine Cho's experience on using sugar to elevate representation for Asian Americans.
