Me Angéline Fournier is CEO of Maeva Investments, an international boutique investment firm, and has more than 25 years of experience in structuring, financing, developing and co-investing in energy/infrastructure and sustainable projects in Mexico, Latin America and Africa. She works with investors from Latin America, Europe, North America and Asia to develop and implement co-investment opportunities in Mexico and elsewhere. She is a member of the Bar of Paris and was named “Woman Leader of the Future” in 2017 by the business magazine Entreprendre. Prior to founding Maeva Investments, she worked as an international business lawyer in the biggest legal offices in Paris (Law Office of SG Archibald) and Canada (Stikeman, Elliott) and as Vice-President of the strategic planning firm Gamma/IsoGroup where she handled corporate as much as governmental development mandates: she was a contributing member of the strategic advisory board to Canada’s Ambassador to the OECD, his excellency Kimon Valaskakis, was part of the circle of the former Prime Minister of Canada, the Honorable Jean Chretien and contributed to the strategy of the PMO and various other government. She is a person of global networks and is a frequent speaker at global investment conferences on the subjects of clean energies, water, technology and agri-business. She carries on the family tradition in the international arena who built major projects such as the English Channel, Yacereta Dam, the Louvre Pyramide in Paris or the city Khasm-Al-Aan. She is on the advisory board of the micro-credit organization FINCA. Angeline holds a Master of Corporate Law from Paris V, a Master of International Law from McGill University and a diploma in Negotiation and Alternative Dispute Resolution from the Harvard Law School (PIL).
